No Investment Advice

Karner Blue is an investment adviser registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Registration does not imply a certain level of skill or expertise. The Site is only intended for clients and prospective clients residing in the United States.

The Site is limited to the dissemination of general information pertaining to Karner Blue's investment advisory services, together with access to additional investment-related information, publications, and links. The information and opinions provided on the Site (i) do not constitute general or personal investment advice, (ii) do not consider the particular investment objectives, financial situations, or needs of any investor, (iii) are not intended to forecast future events or guarantee future results, and (iv) are subject to change without notice.

Accordingly, the Site should not be construed as Karner Blue's solicitation to effect, or attempt to effect, transactions in securities on behalf of any person, or the rendering of personalized investment advice for compensation to any person. You may obtain a copy of Karner Blue's current Form ADV Part 2A (the firm disclosure brochure), which discusses Karner Blue's business operations, services, and fees, by clicking here, visiting the SEC website at www.adviserinfo.sec.gov, or requesting a copy from Karner Blue.

Investment In Securities Involves Risks

Past performance does not imply or guarantee future results, and there is no assurance that a separate account managed according to any Karner Blue thematic strategy will achieve its investment objective. Investment in a thematic strategy involves risk, including the possible loss of the entire principal amount invested.

The price and value of securities referred to on the Site will fluctuate and diversification cannot assure a profit or guarantee against a loss. An investor should carefully consider the investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses of the applicable thematic strategy before investing.

This information and additional information about Karner Blue are included in Karner Blue's Form ADV Part 2A (the firm disclosure brochure). An investor should always obtain current information and perform due diligence before making any investment. Karner Blue reserves the right to modify its current investment strategies and techniques based on changing market conditions or client needs.

You could lose money on an investment in any thematic strategy, or the applicable thematic strategy could underperform, for the following reasons: (i) the market prices of stocks held in the thematic strategy may fall, (ii) the stocks held in the thematic strategy, which are selected based on non-financial factors, may not perform as expected, (iii) the management practices used by Karner Blue in connection with the thematic strategy may not achieve the desired result, and (iv) the allocation of assets among various market cap sectors and geographical regions may cause the thematic strategy to underperform.

In addition, large cap companies may be unable to respond quickly to new competitive challenges, such as changes in technology, and also may not be able to attain the high growth rate of successful smaller companies, especially during extended periods of economic expansion. Prices of micro-, small- and mid-cap stocks can be more volatile than those of larger, more established companies. Micro-, small- and mid-cap companies are more likely to have more limited product lines, fewer capital resources, and less depth of management than larger companies.

Investing in the American Depositary Receipts of foreign companies involves additional risks relating to political, social, and economic developments abroad, differences between the regulations that apply to U.S. and foreign issuers and markets, the potential for reduced liquidity and increased volatility, and exposure to currency fluctuations because they represent an interest in securities that are not denominated in U.S. dollars.

The risks of investing in emerging market securities are greater than those of investing in securities of developed foreign countries. These risks include volatile currency exchange rates, periods of high inflation, increased risk of default, greater social, economic, and political uncertainty and instability, less governmental supervision and regulation of securities markets, weaker auditing and financial reporting standards, lack of market liquidity, and the significantly smaller market capitalizations of many emerging market issuers.

Investing involves other forms of risk that are not described here. For that reason, you should contact an investment professional before acting on any information provided on the Site. Karner Blue is neither a law firm nor an accounting firm, and no portion of the Site content should be construed as legal, accounting, or tax advice.
